

Short Biography

Marco Ceccarelli is Programme Officer at the European Commission in Brussels (B) where he contributes to the definition of EU policies for the electronics industry. He is one of the main authors of the European “Chips Act” package, and plays a key role in its implementation. Before joining the Commission in 2017, he held several managerial roles at Philips (NL), where he focused on innovation for electronic systems, as well as several executive positions in high-tech SMEs. He began his career as research scientist in Italy and the Netherlands. Marco holds a Laurea degree in Electronic Engineering from the University of Florence (I) and an Executive MBA from the ESSEC business school in Paris (F).

